

CHRISTENSEN'S PLANT CENTER

Wholesale Supplier To Landscape Professionals

What a wonderful modern age we live in.

I have to admit that I stole that line from a movie about warships at the turn of the 18th century. But it still rings very true today.

In this day and age of internet, digital cameras, and smartphones there is no reason for you to wonder what your plant is going to look like. Especially if you are ordering something special for a client. They went on the internet to find that special something for their yard that no one else around them has. You can use the same tool to make them happy.

Every day we email and text pictures of plant material to landscape contractors and landscape architects for either their approval or the approval of their clients. Even getting pictures from a grower's field is becoming less of an issue. Please be sure to use this to your advantage. Show your clients exactly which plant they are getting before you have to pick it up, or even have it dug out of the field.
