

Niche planting

Consider some ground cover perennial plants for any projects that involve filling crevices in brick, stone, or pavers. You would be pretty surprised at how many low-growing varieties are available from which to choose. We carry sprawling perennials and can help you make the best choice depending on the site and the amount of foot traffic and/or neglect the plants can handle.

Creeping thyme and low-growing sedum are easy favorites and come in a variety of color and form depending on the species/cultivars. There are so many more perennials that can fill niches in easily beyond the two listed above. However, it's important to consider that the actual size of the plant may change, depending on flower height for each one. Unless of course you DO want "plant balloons" popping up from the pavers.

The many sprawling perennials we carry are too numerous to list here, so don't hesitate to ask our salespeople for help to make the best choices for your project.
